

Conversation

Indebted by Proxy: How Women and children are faring in the Carceral State

Dr. Christopher Wildeman
Professor; Director,
Bronfenbrenner Center
for Translational Research; Associate Vice Provost for the Social Sciences

Tuesday, September 24th 5 – 6 p.m.
Sperry Hall Room 104

Roughly 90% of prison and jail inmates are men, yet mass incarceration could have profound implications for the women and children who are left behind. In this talk, I show how many women and children have been exposed to family member incarceration and outline some channels through which this event could harm them.

This is a conversation brought to you by the Cultural & Intellectual Climate Committee, SUNY Conversations in The Disciplines, and the College Arts and Lecture Series.

Contact [benjamin.wilson02@Cortland.edu](mailto:benjamin.wilson02@ Cortland.edu) for information about this event.

